Franz Liszt's Des Tages Laute Stimmen Schweigen

Des Tages laute Stimmen schweigen

Des Tages laute Stimmen schweigen,
Und dunkeln will es allgemach;
Ein letztes Schimmern in den Zweigen --
Dann zieht auch dies der Sonne nach.

Noch leuchten ihre Purpurgluten
Um jene Höhen, kahl und fern,
Doch in des Äthers klaren Fluten
Erzittert schon ein blasser Stern.

Ihr müden Seelen rings im Kreise,
So ist euch wieder Ruh' gebracht;
Aufatmen hör' ich euch noch leise --
Dann küßt euch still und mild die Nacht.

The loud voices of the day have fallen

The loud voices of the day have fallen silent,
And gradually darkness falls,
A last shimmering in the branches --
Then the shimmer, too, follows the [vanishing] sun.

Its purple glow still casts a radiance
About yonder heights, barren and distant,
But in the clear flood of the ether
Already a pale star tremblingly appears.

Ye tired souls all about in a circle,
Thus peace is once more brought to you;
I still hear you quietly breathe a sigh of relief --
Then the night kisses you soundlessly and gently.

1. Harmonic Analysis

- a) Analyze the harmony of the entire work using functional chord symbols.
- b) Provide additional root quality chord symbols for the entire first page.

/74

2. Dramatic Harmony

- a) The half diminished 7th chord in m.7 reoccurs twice more on page 2. Circle these two occurrences.

- b) How does the harmony from m. 44-55 reflect the text "Erzittert schon ein blasser Stern"?

/4

- c) How can the abundance of first inversion chords, along with the unresolved ending be considered word painting?
